Camilla Lambert

presents a workshop on

Taking a different point of view

The workshop will involve thinking about how to write from different points of view, and especially imagining the situation of a person who is a minor character in a well-known story or myth, or may be the villain instead of the hero.

There will be examples, some taken from Greek myths but no one needs to know these well. You might however like to think about a story you are familiar with, such as Cinderella, or Hansel and Gretel, and come prepared to write from the perspective of one of the ugly sisters, or the witch in the wood.
